BANKER WARD DENIES IT ALL.

His Firm Didn't Have Any of the Field Securities.

He Says There is Nothing in Detective Palmer's Story.

The story told by Detective Frank Palmer in regard to the discovery of mislaid securities to the value of several hundred thousand dollars alleged to belong to the bankrupt firm of Clark, Ward & Co., which was printed in THE EVENING WORLD last June, has been revived and has now been made the basis of an investigation of the firm of Clark, Ward & Co., bankers of 79 Broadway.

When Palmer told his story to an EVENING WORLD reporter last summer he was very mysterious, and refused to tell any one where he had found the missing securities. He now says they were deposited with Clark, Ward & Co., and the amount is $300,000.

His affidavit, which is made upon information and belief, forms the main ground for the order issued by Justice Pratt, of Brooklyn, yesterday, on the application of Hirsberg, Gray & Haynes, who represent Robert E. Diez, one of the creditors of the firm, compelling banker Frederick Ward to appear before the court at 3 o'clock this afternoon and tell what he knows about the missing bonds.

Mr. Ward says he knows nothing whatever about the securities alleged to have been deposited with him by Field, and that that is positively all he can tell the referee.

Mr. Ward's story is based on the beginning to end, he said to an EVENING WORLD reporter this morning, he never had any dealings with Field or with any member of his firm.

This detective claims that a letter written to him in the summer of 1891 by Field was discovered in which he stated that he was going to deposit with him certain securities.

Mr. Ward says he never received such a letter, and that he never saw any securities which he claimed to have discovered and was able to recover.
